These results have implications for the design of the experimental environment. The results suggest that the experimental environment should be designed to minimize the influence of the experimenter on the results. This can be achieved by using a computerized system to control the experiment and to collect the data. This system should be able to control the presentation of the stimuli, the timing of the responses, and the recording of the data. The system should also be able to control the feedback provided to the subjects. The system should be able to control the feedback provided to the subjects in a way that is consistent with the experimental design. "The current U.S. regulation against the practice, still mostly on the state's liability ground, has actually served as a double-edged sword," says Lawrence, "because it has also inhibited the development of a national standard."

The above guidelines from the UK's major water treatment standards represent the minimum to be achieved in order to ensure a standard of best practice.

The importance of animal stress has been widely recognized in the field of animal welfare. Stress is a complex physiological response to environmental challenges, and it can have significant effects on an animal's health and well-being. In this paper, we will explore the various factors that can cause stress in animals and the potential consequences of chronic stress.

The study identifies several measures that will be required to ensure that the benefits of the program are realized. These include the need to ensure that the program is integrated with other health and social services, and to ensure that the program is sustainable in the long term.

Several factors are going to make the task of creating a product or an application for mobile devices more complex. The increasing use of sensors in applications, along with the growing need for applications to be able to work in a variety of environments, will make the task of creating a product or an application for mobile devices more complex.

After my first lecture, a number of the students expressed interest in attending the first two sessions of the course. The response to the subsequent sessions was much less enthusiastic. The students who attended the first two sessions were mostly from the Faculty of Science, and the others from the Faculty of Arts. I suspect that the students from the Faculty of Science were more interested in the course because they were more familiar with the scientific method.

Erap to be grilled by Grade 6 student

Manila, Philippines (PDI) - A Grade 6 student from a private school in Manila will grill President Joseph Estrada during a simulated press conference on Tuesday.

The student, who is 11 years old, will ask questions about the president's performance in office and his handling of the 1998 election controversy.

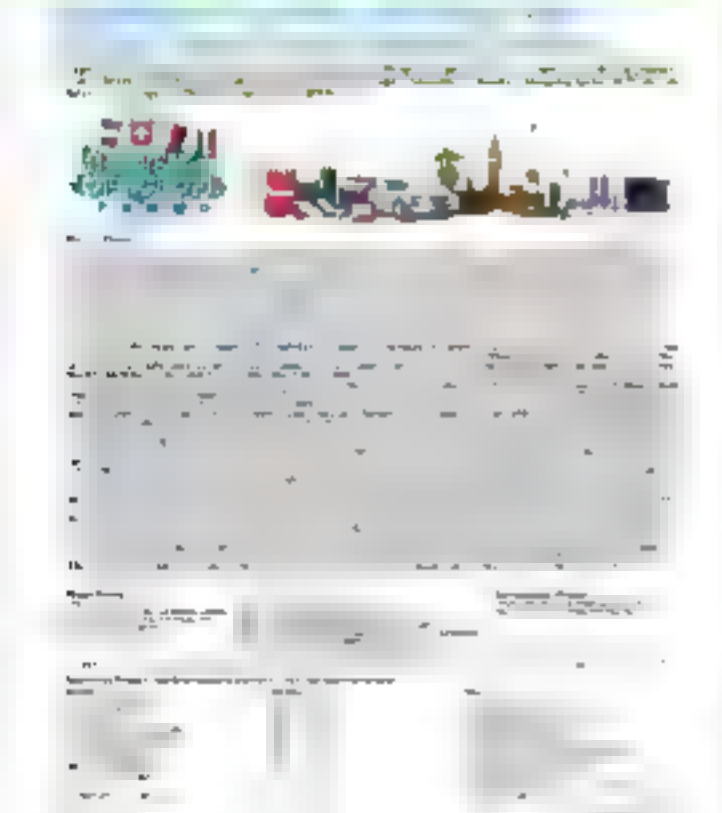

The activity is part of a school project on the Philippine government and the role of the president.

Producers will stay away from 'unfair' film fest, warns Leo

By Joseph Velasco

MANILA, Philippines — The Philippine International Film Festival (PFF) is not a place where producers will want to go, according to a warning from a top industry official.

Leo Crisostomo, president of the Philippine Motion Picture Association (PMPA), said that the festival is "unfair" to producers because it is a government-run event that is not open to the market.

He said that the festival is a "closed" event where producers are not allowed to compete for awards. He said that the festival is a "government-run" event that is not open to the market.

Kerry adjudged winner in final debate with Bush for the American worker, and I'm going to do it in a way that is fiscally sound," Kerry said, promising to "restore the fiscal discipline we had in the 1990s."

The stakes were high for the final debate, with both candidates trying to take advantage of their last chance to reach a television audience of tens of millions before the Nov. 2 election.

Weaving in Iraq issue

And while the debate focused on domestic issues, the two rivals also took advantage of chances to weave in Iraq, repeating previous stands from the first two debates.

Kerry blamed Bush for rushing into the war and pushing away allies, and "as a result America is now bearing this extraordinary burden where we are not as safe as we ought to be."

Bush pointed with pride to the Afghan elections last weekend as evidence his policies were working. "Freedom is on the march," he said.

Kerry attacked Bush's record on health care, saying 5 million of the 45 million uninsured Americans had lost their health insurance under Bush as costs continued to rise.

Health care

"This president has turned his back on the wellness of America," Kerry said, adding the health care system in the United States was "not working for the American family and it's gotten worse under President Bush."

Bush said Kerry's health care plan, which the president claimed would cost $1.2 trillion, was an "empty promise" and a "bait-and-switch" program that the Democratic candidate would never be able to pay for.

"A plan is not a litany of complaints and a plan is not to lay out programs that you can't pay for," Bush said, insisting Kerry's plan would limit the choices of patients.

"I believe the role of government is to stand side by side with our citizens to help them realize their dreams, not tell citizens how to live their lives," the president added.

Like Tony Soprano

Bush attacked Kerry's Senate record and accused him of supporting tax increases 98 times and voting to exceed the budget caps 277 times. "My opponent talks about fiscal sanity. His record in the United States Senate does not match his rhetoric," he said.

Kerry said "anybody can play with these votes, everybody knows that." He explained he had voted for tax cuts over 600 times, adding Bush had no standing to question his fiscal judgment.

"Being lectured by the president on fiscal responsibility is a little bit like Tony Soprano talking to me about law and order," Kerry said, referring to the murderous mob boss in the US television program "The Sopranos." "This president has taken a $5.6-trillion surplus and turned it into deficits as far as the eye can see," he said.

The shift to domestic issues was supposed to be an advantage for Kerry, who leads Bush in most polls on his ability to lead the country on jobs, the economy, health care and the environment.

Domestic agenda drowned out

But those issues—the bread-and-butter domestic agenda for Democrats for decades—have been drowned out in the campaign this year by the clamorous debate over Iraq.

The candidates covered a wide range of topics, from gay marriage to Social Security to flu vaccines, but returned frequently to their favorite campaign trail themes.

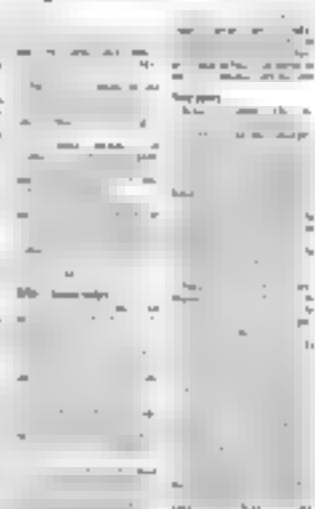

Bush accused Kerry of planning a far larger tax increase than just repealing Bush's tax cuts for those making more than $200,000.

Kerry pointed out the Bush administration consistently favored special interests over everyday Americans and said the first step to restoring fiscal sanity was "rolling back George Bush's unaffordable tax cut for the wealthiest people."

Gov't blacklists 235 contractors

By Amanda Bening

MANILA — The Department of Public Works and Highways (DPWH) has blacklisted 235 contractors for failing to comply with the terms and conditions of their contracts, according to a report released by the agency.

The blacklisted contractors include 100 private firms and 135 individuals. The DPWH said that the contractors were blacklisted for various reasons, including failure to submit required documents, failure to complete projects on time, and failure to pay taxes and other obligations.

WORK

DO away with boring and plain leather satchels. Toss a huge metallic bag instead. It's functional yet stylish and fun. Brown carry-all from Calte Femme.

DOnce and Gabbana's animal-print pump-toe slippers are extremely sexy and the perfect foil for more conservative corporate wear.

AT WORK, the bombshell is an alluring as ever in a light trench, tube top and miniskirt pleated trousers from Calte Femme. The dichotomy of the crop top and masculine trousers surely makes an interesting statement.

Release your inner bombshell!

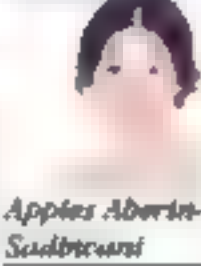

"I've never known what it is I was supposed to have had. All I do know is that sex appeal isn't taught before. It's not the way you walk or the way you smile, it's the way you are."

—Lana Turner

HAVE you ever been in the same place with a gorgeous, glamorous woman who effortlessly made heads turn, be they of the same or opposite sex? I've seen it happen once too often, and I've always wondered what it is that lends these mysterious creatures such magnetic appeal.

I've also asked myself if it's possible to achieve it; shall we say, manufacture such a bombshell allure. Is it in the clothes she wears, the high heels she wears in or the subtle but enhancing makeup on her face? Sure, all those things contribute to the total package but in the end, I still think it's all about the attitude.

APPLES' PICKINGS

Apples' Advertisers' Subscribers

Outright femininity and sheer confidence are essential in developing glamour and releasing one's inner bombshell. Women like these are never afraid to be noticed and even tend to the fact that they are objects of envy and desire. And contrary to popular belief, bombshells are a scanty, mythical lot.

Style-wise these women have strong personalities and are not afraid to dress in a playfully seductive manner. Mind you, they are never trashy, campy or vain. Bombshells include the likes of Sophia Loren, Jayne Mansfield or Kim Novak to name a few.

If you are in any way aspiring to be one of these enticing beings, start working from the inside and it will surely project in your appearance and action. But while you're at it, dare to wear and bare in how subtly sexy poses that will definitely make you, in a matter of speaking, the life of any party.

Go ahead, start turning heads!

Re-engineering my face

By Kiky Go
Contributor

PERHAPS because the memory of a friend recovering from plastic surgery at L'Ermitage in Los Angeles has never left my mind, I am averse to plastic surgery. I cannot forget the day I walked into my friend's room at the posh boutique hotel where the very rich of Los Angeles go for post-surgery privacy. To say my friend's face looked like it was run over by a truck is an understatement. Her face was wrapped in bandages like a mummy, but it was the reddish purple rings around her eyes that told me not only had Rocky Balboa finished with her but she joined the Fight Club and didn't make the (upper) cut—all this for “a little lift along my cheekbones to make me look rested,” as she said.

I couldn't eat for three days, and the last time that happened was after I saw “Silence of the Lambs.” This is the best diet-starvation from fear. No wonder L'Ermitage served guests anything they wanted—because if they looked in the mirror they would lose their appetites. At least they had really nice bathrooms, unfortunately with mirrors.

No pain, no gain

However, since the beginning of this year

Aquamid somehow lessened my aversion to cosmetic curing

(or since they changed the lighting in our elevator) I, too, was looking like Mohammed Ali finished with me—but toward the end of his career—so I looked more like Charlie Thorne in “Monsieur” than Linda Blair in “The Exorcist.”

Last month I asked my dermatologist, Dr. Rose Gamayayan (tel. 8999677/8977685, Tuesday-Sunday) what to do about the shadow my Mount Rushmore of a nose cast on the lower half of my face. Aside from my chest almost touching the floor, my jaw area was beginning to touch my chest.

I pointed out the deep, dark parabola running from the base of my nose to my chin. A good look for Geometry class but does nothing to prepare me for wearing Bottega Veneta this fall.

Dr. Gamayayan kindly pointed out to me that what I called laugh lines was not the problem, but the aging of my naso-labial area, at the base of my nose. She suggested a permanent, injectable gel implant called Aquamid (www.aquamid.com) made out of a similar material to soft contact lenses.

Well, if I've used lenses in my eyes for over 20 years and I've even swallowed some by mistake, how much could this hurt—a lot, in more ways than one, as I was later to find out. But well worth the pain.
